A little song. Sir George, III, by one of the loyal subjects of the Gracious Lady his Grand-daughter. Reigwood, 4th (5th) July, 1780.

Where George? All men, say,
Will Peter let you out for a day?
And for a day from the Merry Sphere?
But then wrapping them, Mother's care,
One right wing and she'll let you fly
This same glorious Fourth she Kept by our Lord and Convid'd there
Should be you us also the year of the year.

More all our happy stupidity
Made the boys win three chest of Sea;
And had that ten go the usual hole
This year will might be elsepe today.
Jonathan might have lived sincerely in the young brother of General John, with faith in the rigid device of kings ded to Britannia’s approval through Believing this unique event must be sure,
Johnnie, by premonition.
And never again have gotten the chance of claiming this great inheritance;
for even the thought have come home to mind that this great free workship in all mankind was more than a possibility — but for that happy stupidity!

To dear Flunderer, me and you
May take the credit fairly in this,
And drink to the joys between chimes & tears
Then Carousing you may go back to the spheres.

Sc modera vallada of Kingwood.

In August, eighteen seventy-seven
And Kingwood woods are green.
As placid as the stars in Heaven
Fair Amy Margate Queen.

The royal king, and royal queen
And the princess Vallie
Are gone upon a pilgrimage
Unto a far country.

In Sandal shoe, with scallop shell
I came the queen to see
And brought with me a little maid
Whom I loved tendril

We were entreated fair and well
And kept right royally.
Fair Amy gave us wine and milk
And the tranquility.

Now blessings on the royal race
To whom these balls belong
And from their right & virtuous place
Be they ever parted long.
But come in safety and in health
From out that far country.
Blest be the ship that transports well
All on the friendly sea.

And may the bonfires rage full high
And song and shout swell free
The might, the king & counsels good
Come back from on the sea.

Fairyland Rediscovered.

Once upon a time Fairyland was all around us, a dream. To us, with the rest of the little gnomes, we were happy in fields and garden. Then the naughty rail roads came and frightened the dear little creatures off to Fairyland faded away.

I have found it again though, no matter where.

The Fairies employed their servants the elves to dance about with mountains of lovely valley, into which no railroad would never, or if it did would have to back right out the same way it came. In that valley the good fairies still live and enjoy themselves, making bright day for all the well behaved.

You should see the house in which the fairies live, a very odd and pretty running one of their own devising. They began with a root or underground stem which they found there, but have grafted on a plant of grape and another sort running out from the Old Rock. I think the fairies do this themselves, because they have always on the growing end of the vine, and you find them each year, farther away from the root.

Then too the house is so curiously lit by night! Sparkles come down from the hillside and scatter through the flowers in which the fairies sit to eat and sleep. Water comes flowing in by little, hidden veins, and there are fountains throughout the vine everywhere.

The fairies, with the help of their own roots, the earth, make the most in worth changes also in the landscape.
If they happen to see a fancy a pond, they bring it to set it down where they want it, so that a silvery lake blossoms
This year where once fed the last. Streams are shifted about in the manner, so many a morning you may behold recent brooks, where water never ran before.

The watchfulness of the fairies & their servants the dwarfs makes this secluded land very difficult of approach.

If you walk through some mountain path or woodland to make the wonderful discovery, it is only by chance if you can never find it again, for the magic power lifts up the end of the path turns it elsewhere; or breaks it off in the middle so that it goes nowhere; or splits it up into strips which disappear before you. Hence it is by no means easy to enter this new land of the fairies.

When you are fortunate enough to be welcome, the path is all right, but you never want to make your spirit fail by as you recall of faith in the dreamiest good fortune of the first. M. S. Doro.

Kingwood, it was a happy day
When to thy vale I came,
And tho' I needs must pass away
I still will leave my name.

He smiles not, who in solemn mood
Was read a graver's tale
Although the words be queer and rude
This sorrow must prevail.

And ye who scan these senseless rhymes
Restrain your rising laugh.

My head is so empty, filled with
I cannot scaven up an idea,
and yet I am sure it would slay me
To hear you say "That is not queer!"
Indeed, I must die, I assure you,
So might you remember at tea
To hear you remark about a lawyer
Was odious as odious could be.

But still, I am not so young, so
Will burn from the sun of my ways,
Be guiltless and pure as a baby
And pure as R. 5.

That's all problematic. But surely
There's one thing is certain, it is this,
Whenever His Majesty alone
Shall deign me to lead me an ass.
My saying as oft he’s been heard &—

"There’s naught that is pure, true, and fair"

"Apologet" I’ll cry "it’s absurd to

"Talk that way while Rainwood is there!"

Where once was the Garden of Eden
The wise men have grieved in vain;
In spite of much learned searching
They now could find it again.
Their search was a failure indeed, 'tis
The reason to me it is plain.

For vanity, toil and as follows:
That garden in many a bit
Was torn, and her mountains and hollows
Was scattered, wherever they lit.
The Sirens' fair shrine, and Apollo's
Each got a small fragment of it.

And some fell in valleys Tyrolean,
And some on the banks of the Rhine;
And sweet Southern blossoms magnolian
Painted behind the perfume divine;
[Now what's in these brackets is wholly an Afterthought, filling the line!]

And this I was aiming to utter,

A long, lovely scene flew

Above the green hillside to flutter.

All flashing with paradise dew

And golden with Alderney butter—

A blessing that Eden never knew.

It fluttered, and then like a blanket

Upon the fair landscape below—

New beauty conferring, down sank it.

As soft and as silent as snow,

And over each flowing bank, it

Cast sudden new glory and glow.

And other things—speaking at random—

Grew up in that paradise air,

Such as banjo and big dogs and tennis,

Lawn-tennis and croquet rare;

These lines, as I say who have scanned them,

The poet could easily expand.
When banished for much too iniquitable
Leaving, from Adam and Eve
Left Eden in anguish; it is it
Surprising that thus they should prize:
You just go to Ringwood and visit,
And see how you feel when you have?

I have a much higher regard for Mr. Perkins' opinion of Rev. Hunters than I did that reign. Oct 9th 1882.
The ring of gold, the symbol of wealth
Unending and endless behold;
The wood, which is wonder yet more than itself
In its shaftlets of scarlet and gold.

But now "ring," now "wood," and I mean it.
By the horn which is my cock,
Are half as bright as the medals at
Which fly in my wholeness: "Ring-wood."

"Of any thought of mine, or song or tale,
Has ever given delight or consolation,
Ye have repaid me back a thousand fold,
By every friendly sign and salutation.

Thanks for the sympathies that ye have shown!
Thanks for each kindly word, each silent token,
That teaches me when seeming most alone
Friends are around us, though "no word be spoken."

Ringwood 7/8/83
After what's gone before,
To fill these pages well
This hand cannot aspire.
To fill them ill, I'm sure
Would be my last desire.

The last sad (write)!
